Invasion Marks A 750-Mile
Advance by U. S.
Ground Troops

FIGHTING IS FIERCE

Nimitz Reveals Commands
Of the Various Invasion
Units

By Joseph A. Bors
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
ADVANCED PACIFIC FLEET
HEADQUARTERS, GUAM, Feb. 19
—(INS)—American Marines, storming ashore from an 800-ship convoy, invaded Iwo Jima under cover of an earth-shaking barrage while 750 miles to the north, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today, other carrier planes destroyed or damaged 659 Jap planes and 36 ships.

The invasion of Iwo, largest of the strategic volcano group of islands, marked a 750-mile advance by the American ground troops from their next closest base in the Marianas archipelago to the south.

Announcement of the Iwo invasion, previously reported by the Japs, was made by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz in the second of two special communiques issued within about one half hour of each other.

The communique announcing the invasion, though failing to mention the fierce fighting that apparently got underway as the leathernecks staged the first landings on territory considered part of the Tokyo Prefecture, revealed that Adm. Raymond A. Spruance was in command of carrier forces and amphibious forces staging the operation.

Invasion units were commanded by Lieut. Gen. Holland Smith, veteran of other dramatic amphibious thrusts, while Lieut. Gen. M. F.
Harrison directed the strategic aircraft—Army land-based units—supporting the Iwo offensive.

Over-all command of the amphibious forces was held by Vice Adm.
Richmond Kelly Turner, whose warships included the "old battleships", U. S. S. New York, Texas, Nevada, Arkansas, Idaho and Tennessee, victims of the Pearl Harbor sneak attack.

Iwo is the site of several good airfields, from which the Japs sent up their best interceptors against giant Superfortress formations raiding against Japanese targets from bases in the Marianas.

American warships had begun working over its defenses on Friday, knocking out or damaging severely at least six of its "strongest" coastal batteries and inflicting substantial damage to whatever strongpoints remained after 76 days of consecutive bombing by land-based U. S. aircraft.

On the same day that the U. S. ships took up the shelling of Iwo, the greatest carrier task force ever assembled—the famous "task force 58" which ranged the Far Western Pacific at will last summer—sent some 1200 planes against the Tokyo-Yokohama region of Japan.

In what Nimitz described as a victory "as historic as it is decisive," Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher's task force 58 caught the Japs by "complete tactical surprise"—including four warships—damaged at least 22 others, destroyed 509 Jap planes, and probably destroyed or damaged 150 others.

As against this staggering toll taken of the enemy's air and navy strength, 49 U. S. planes and "30 or 40 pilots" were lost. Not a single American surface ship was damaged by enemy action.

"U. S. Marines, supported by heavy units of the U. S. Pacific Fleet and by shore-based and carrier aircraft, landed in Iwo Island in the

UP-TO-PRESS-TIME WAR BULLETINS (By International News Service)

Violent Battles Rage Near Frankfurt

Moscow—Violent battles raged along the approaches to the fortress city of Frankfurt southeast of Berlin today as massed artillery of two mighty Soviet armies blasted crumbling Nazi resistance before the "side door" to the Reich capital.

Large Luftwaffe reinforcements were thrown into the swirling battles south of the Oder bend in an attempt to prevent a full-scale junction between the First White Russian Army drawn up before Berlin and the First Ukrainian Army driving northwestward from Silesia.

Marshal Ivan S. Konev rushed tanks to the front as he battered his way toward the twin bastions of Cottbus and Guben guarding the approaches to the capital.

Other units of Konev's Army drove toward Berlin's back door through Saxony after toppling the railway junction of Sagan 25 miles west of the Oder and Naumburg, 13 miles farther north.

Battle Five Fires in Philadelphia

Philadelphia—Firemen battled five fires which broke out in different sections of Philadelphia today bringing death to one man and forcing more than a score of persons from their households into sub-freezing temperatures. Charles Shraft, 43, perished when his bed enveloped him in flames after he fell asleep smoking a cigarette.

OPPOSE REMOVAL OF OLEOMARGARINE TAX

Grangers Want Tax For Gas
Used in Farm Tractors
Remitted

A LANGHORNE SESSION

LANGHORNE, Feb. 19—Members of Middletown Grange at a meeting last week opposed proposals to remove tax on oleomargarine and to place such on the market with color already added.

The legislative committee was instructed to draft a letter to be sent Representatives and Senators, asking them to use their influence against the removal of the tax on oleomargarine.

Another proposed bill before Congress was considered during the report of the legislative committee, and if this is passed, the tax on gasoline used in the operation. The Grange went on record as being in favor of this bill, and the legislative committee was instructed to write the Representatives and Senators to explain the stand of the Grange concerning this bill.

During the meeting three applications for membership were received, and the candidates will be given the first and second degrees at the next meeting of the Grange on Wednesday evening, Feb. 28, when a number of candidates from Edgewood Grange will also be initiated.

Members were reminded of the anniversary meeting which will be held in fellowship hall of the Newtown Presbyterian Church on March 24. Mrs. Herman Hestno, chairman of the women's work committee, which will have charge of the supper, asked for volunteers to assist.

The literary program was in charge of the lecturer, Harry Wilson. Mrs. Bjarni Bjarnason read a paper on the origin of St. Valentine's Day.

Announcement was made of the quarterly meeting of Lower Bucks Pomona, which will be held at Edgewood on Wednesday, March 7.

Workman Injured As Pole Snaps While He Is Climbing

Still clinging to a pole which snapped at its base while he was climbing it, Robert K. Lewis was removed from beneath the heavy timber and taken to Harriman Hospital yesterday.

Lewis, aged 38, who resides at 223 Taft street, had commenced climbing a pole at the yards of Alt-house Coal Co., and when he reached a point about 10 feet from the ground the pole snapped and fell on him.

Hospital officials report that he has an incomplete fracture of the pelvis. Lewis is an employee of Philadelphia Electric Co.

CROYDONITE'S GROUP FLIES MANY MISSIONS

A. P. Ludwig, Aerial Gunner, Promoted; Biancosino's Group Praised

SOLDIERS' ACTIVITIES

15TH AAF IN ITALY—Albert P.
Ludwig, 21, son of Mrs. J. Ludwig, Sycamore ave., Croydon, Pa., has been promoted to the grade of staff sergeant. He is an aerial gunner with a B-24 Liberator group which has flown 400 combat missions.

This group, commanded by Col.
T. Q. Graff, of Ohio, and based now in southern Italy, first gained fame in the deserts of North Africa.
Originally destined for operations in Asia, it was halted in Egypt and sent to the aid of the British 8th Army, then in a death struggle with Rommel's Afrika Korps. From Tobruk to Tunis, it struck at Axis objectives and for its outstanding efficiency and sustained performance was awarded a Distinguished Unit Citation.

The group has numerous "firsts" to its credit. It was the first U. S.
AAF unit to be based in Africa, first to be based in continental Europe, first to attack the Italian Fleet, first to bomb enemy targets in Greece and Crete, and was the first heavy bombardment group to strike at Naples and Rome. The group's bombing of the oil center of Ploesti in June, 1942, was the first effort by U. S. bombers against targets in Europe. A later mission to Ploesti, the famed low-level attack in August, 1943, won the group another unit citation.

During the past year the group has bombed many of the high priority targets of Europe. For an outstanding bombing attack on the oil centreries at Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, in June, 1944, the group was awarded its third citation as a distinguished unit.

Sgt. Ludwig entered the army in September 1941. He received his aerial gunner's wings at Tyndall Field, Fla., in May, 1944. He is a Sperdy ball specialist.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Anti-Sap Plan

Washington, Feb. 17.
THIS is a country
of strange contradictions and inconsistencies. Not the least of these is the frequency with which, after having adopted a sound policy, we insist upon nullifying it by extreme stupidity.
For example, the general acclaim with which the Yalta announcements were received appears to have established beyond question that the country—and Congress, too—overwhelmingly favor not only American entrance into a postwar international organization to insure peace but also full participation in the immense job of straightening out the tangle into which world affairs have been thrust by the war.

—O—
THE POLLY of narrow nationalism has been put behind us and we are at last prepared to assume our international responsibilities. The dissenters have shriveled in number and in importance. Whether you like it or not, we are about to take our place as one of the chief managers of the postwar world. This being so, it would seem desirable to play our part as competently as possible; to rid ourselves of whatever handicaps prevent using our weight effectively for the furtherance of our general objectives—and the protection of our own interests. To this end, it would seem particularly desirable that we be at least as well informed as our allies and colleagues. Yet, when a sound proposal to advance us to that level is suggested, there arises an opposition which distorts the facts and misrepresents the purpose.

THE CASE in point concerns the recommendation made, at the request of the President, by Maj. Gen.
William J. Donovan, for a co-ordinated national intelligence service which, through a specially trained group of interpreters, will equip us with accurate information of the political, economic, scientific and military developments the world over; also keep us posted as to all subversive activities at home and abroad. We have no such service now. Our major allies and many of our minor ones have. Our disad-vantage is clear. The Donovan recommendations propose to remove this. The reasons for opposition largely spring from absurd misconceptions and bureaucratic jealousies. Briefly, the facts are these:—In our government there are some half dozen and more unrelated and unco-ordinated secret intelligence services. Besides the Army and the Navy, there are those

A DEADLY PARALLEL

The most eloquent speech expressing the anguish and dismay of the Polish Liberals over the acceptance by Churchill and Roosevelt of the Stalin plans for Poland came from a Wisconsin Congressman, Alvin E. O'Konski.

In a nation more concerned over clear thinking than an artificial unity, this stirring address deserved more attention than it has received. It presents the cause of the British Exiles, so long recognized by London and Washington as the official Polish Government, now only to become a "rump" to the Russian set-up in Poland.

It is a most emphatic indictment both of the principles of the Crimea Agreement and of their application to a typical case in which the objectives of justice and liberty would have surely been thought to have been especially desired—since it was the first try-out of the new program.

Representative O'Konski made an interesting comparison—the raptures of the New Dealers and the "inter-nationalists" over the Big Three pact, with the similar hysterical joy when the Man with the Umbrella, Chamberlain, announced that he had arranged lasting peace for the world by the Munich pact turning Czechoslovakia over to Hitler.

Hard as it may seem to remember the fact, in view of the disastrous future history of the Munich pact and the contempt with which this classic bit of appeasement now is viewed, Mr. Chamberlain came home a self-confessed hero—and many others accepted his report at its face value.

As a newspaper said at the time: "No conqueror returning from the battlefield has come back with nobler laurels."

The Archbishop of Canterbury called him "happy warrior." The Poet-Laureate wrote a panegyric. The Hague sent a large floral tribute by airplane. A leading newspaper suggested the issue of souvenir stamps to raise a fund to be presented to Mr. Chamberlain. General Smuts hailed him as "a great champion in the lists."

He was widely talked of for the Nobel Peace Prize.
A Swiss community sent him a marvelous gold clock.
Lisbon raised money to build him a monument, and in France funds were collected to buy him a chateau.

From throughout the world came more than twenty thousand telegrams of approval and wagonloads of flowers.

The case which O'Konski made against the Big Three is that, just as the praise of Chamberlain now is the laughing-stock of the world, so may the hysterical eulogies of the Crimea Agreement become ridiculous in the future—and, according to O'Konski's belief, for the same reason: that the yardstick was appeasement, not justice.

A phase of this parallel which O'Konski did not touch is that the words of Chamberlain himself, discussing his own doings at Munich, were astonishingly like those now

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

ALLIES CRASH INTO TOWN OF GOCH

Paris—British and Canadian spearheads crashed into the vital Siegfried stronghold of Goch from the north and south today as the U. S.
Third Army farther south was reported entirely through the Westwall along a seven-mile front after gains of more than two miles.

Domination and Scottish Infantry forces smashed into Goch with strong support from tanks and flame throwers. At last reports a savage battle from street to street was in progress as the Nazis sought desperately to retain their hold on the pivotal bastion.

The Third Army, meanwhile, was surging eastward from a front which extended from Enzen to Cruchten and renewed its drive against the Westwall in the Sins area.

The drive of Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's forces into Goch was made in a sudden thrust launched in foggy darkness with visibility approaching the zero point.
Columns driving into the town from the south found easier going and raced through formidable defenses which were not fully manned indicating the thrust caught the German garrison off balance, although they fought savagely.

HEADQUARTERS ON GUAM

Several weeks ago Admiral of the Fleet Chester W. Nimitz announced he had moved his Pacific headquarters from Pearl Harbor to a "forward area." And right on the heels of an official announcement identifying the new headquarters site as the Island of Guam in the Marianas came the flash from Guam of the American carrier-plane attack on Tokyo. The Japs have reason to know that Admiral Nimitz is operating from a "forward area."

"Forward area" it is, too. In addition to being the spot from which the Navy's top commander in the Pacific directs his far-ranging forces, Guam is the base of Maj. Gen. Curtis Lemay's 21st Bomber Command, which dispatches Superfortresses from the Marianas to attack the Japanese home islands.

Furthermore, despite the establishment of a large military and naval installation on Guam by the seabees following its capture nearly eight months ago, Japanese snipers are still active on the island. Hunger has forced some to surrender, but most of them have to be rooted out by Marine patrols.

The necessity for an extensive rebuilding program on Guam and for hunting down remnants of the enemy garrison recalls, ironically, that Guam was formerly an American outpost in the Pacific. Guam fell an easy prey to the Japanese. It took three years and some hard fighting to win it back.

WEARING THIN

Like other reports on the cigarette shortage, the one prepared by the Federal Trade Commission at the request of Senator Wheeler fails to offer a convincing explanation for the situation. Consequently it will not satisfy the smoking public.

The commission, after an extensive investigation, declares that the shortage is not artificial. It is "directly traceable to the large numbers of cigarettes going to the armed forces and to America's Allies." But at this point the report cites certain factors as contributing to the stringency that will be regarded with considerable skepticism.

For tax figures do not support the statement that the drain on supplies has been "magnified" by increased smoking here at home due to bigger incomes, to "over-eating" by those afraid of being caught short, and by higher nervous tension. Cigarettes are not being sold to civilians in the same volume as in the past, judging by receipts, unless the revenue laws are being circumvented.

However, it may be true that the shortage will get worse and is certainly a fact that "undesirable practices" have arisen in the distribution of cigarettes.

So far no one has come forward with a remedy. Apparently the industry is helpless in the tire matter. But it, instead of the bureaucrats, is likely to get the blame as the public's patience wears thinner.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

(By Courier Staff Member)

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol June 5, 1884. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The Young Ladies' Seminary, Miss A. Merriam, principal, will be permanently closed at the end of this session. It is a matter of deep regret that the patronage of the school did not warrant its further continuance.

Fish frequently get into the street mains, being pumped up from the river while quite small and afterwards growing to considerable size. It is said that they sometimes are found in the water-pipes and the unpleasant taste of water in some houses is owing to their decomposition in the house-pipes.

A machine that will darn stockings has been invented. This will give mothers more time to devote to crazy quilts and other useful household duties.

Morrisville is macadamizing its streets with a gravel that settles down and becomes hard and firm, making an excellent carriage road.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. expect to have their track tanks at Bristol in operation by the 1st of August.

At the congregational meeting of the Presbyterian Church last Monday evening, the following named trustees were elected to serve for the ensuing year: James M. Slack, Charles W. Peirce, George W. Strasser, Dr. H. Purcell, John C. Stuckert and John L. Johnson.

Judge Yerkes of Bucks County is surprising some of the jurymen who did not appear for duty by imposing upon them the full fine provided by law ($25). $25 is an argument that will have more weight in stimulating delinquents to do their duty than any amount of preaching about it.

(Following items culled from Bucks Co. Gazette, week ending June 12, 1884.)

Henry Lear, Esq., has been elected president of the Doylestown National bank, an office held by his late father, Attorney-General Lear.

At the meeting of the school board last Monday . . . a tax rate of $1 on the $100 was made . . .

At the regular meeting of council . . . the street committee reported adversely to the petition for grading Pine street, and recommended the paving of the north side of Lafayette street.

The petition from citizens of Lake street asking for the placing of two lamps on that thoroughfare was not in the opinion of the committee thought advisable to grant, on account of the probability that they would soon be broken. The committee also recommended that work be immediately commenced in making permanent repairs on Otter street, and estimated that $1500 would be required for the work . . .

Sturgeon are present in such numbers in Delaware Bay that a single fisherman caught over 200 in two days last week.

Mr. Joseph Goodwin, of Bristol Township, left a couple of boxes of strawberries at this office yesterday that we have never seen equalled. The largest strawberry in the box measured just eight inches in circumference. Twenty strawberries filled the box. They were of the Sharpless variety . . .

An attempt was made at the council meeting last Monday night to set aside the ordinance relative to fireworks, and give those whose patriotism burned through Chinese crackers a chance to celebrate the "Glorious Fourth." The vote was a close one, but the majority favored the rigid enforcement of the ordinance, and there will be no legal shooting of fireworks in Bristol on the fourth of July next.

of the Department of Justice, the Department of State, the Department of Commerce, the Treasury Department, etc. The information gathered by none of these is available to any other. Usually it is gathered, filed and forgotten. It is an ineffectual, wasteful, silly system such as no other first-class nation would tolerate. Three years ago the President directed all these services to make available their information to General Donovan, who had been named co-ordinator of information. General Donovan had created an organization of picked specialists from university faculties who correlated, supplemented, digested and interpreted the facts. Thus for the first time there was a semblance of co-ordination in this vital business of intelligence. The results were good, though never complete, as some of the services pulled back and others did not co-operate at all.

IT IS clear that when the war is over, unless some action is taken, we promptly will lose back into the old method of gathering intelligence through many separate agencies but rarely interpreting it and using it, largely for the dubious benefit of a single department. It is to avoid this lapse that the President asked General Donovan for recommendations. The Donovan recommendations are free from sound objections. He proposes an ney Soper came to tell Craig there was to be an inquest that afternoon and to ask him if he knew a Frederic Miller.

"Inquest?" cried Craig. "Look here, Miss Cable ought to have a lawyer's advice before . . ."
"It's only a formality," snapped Soper. "She's not to be asked to testify now. The doctor's the only necessary witness just now. And Nugent. What I'd like you to tell me now, is who is Frederic Miller? Your father has given him checks totaling fifteen thousand dollars in the last two years. You must know . . ."

"But I don't!"
"Never heard the name before?" The District Attorney's eyes were little and suspicious.
"Never! And I don't think my father knew anybody of that name!" Craig looked perplexed. "Did you ask Alexia—Mrs. Brent?"

"Certainly. She knew nothing of it either . . . Well, haven't you any idea who it was that struck you that night?" His eyes were on the bandage on Craig's temple.

"No."
"Are you sure it was anybody? You could have fallen."

"But I didn't. I was in the hall. Somebody hit me and dragged me into the linen room. So it must have been a man."

"Not at all. A woman could have done it. Good morning," said the D. A.

And as he left, Nicky entered. I remained, in spite of the look Nicky gave me which invited me to leave. He was limping a little.

"Hurt your foot, Nicky?" queried Craig and Nicky said, "Someone dropped a flashlight on it, in the ruckus the other night. Accidentally, I hope," and glanced at me and lowered his silky eyelashes so there was only a half-hidden but definitely malicious gleam back of them.

I looked blank, as if I'd never heard of a flashlight and Nicky blurted, "Craig, look here. Oughtn't we to do something?"

"Do something?"

"I mean—well, murder's murder. There's either a motive or it's a question of a—homocidal maniac."

"It's in the hands of the police," responded Craig.

"But, Craig," said Nicky, leaning forward suddenly, "do you know who did it?"

"No," declared Craig. And added bluntly, "Do you?"

"No," said Nicky slowly. "That is—of course the police think it was Drue."

"Thanks to you."

"I didn't tell them everything I could have told them," said Nicky in a curiously tentative way.

"What do you mean?"

"Oh, their conversation, for instance. Conrad's and Drue's, just before he died."

Craig's eyes narrowed. "What do you mean? I suppose you listened."

Nicky shrugged; it was again tentative, only half-assenting.

"Well," asked Craig, "what did you hear?"

If the library door had been closed, I didn't think he had heard anything, for it was extraordinarily thick and solid. Still, it might not have been quite closed.

Nicky hesitated, then lifted his elegantly squared and tailored shoulders again. "Think it over, Craig," he advised.

"You didn't hear anything. And if you did, it's nothing to me."

"Drue is nothing to you?"

"You heard me."

Nicky's bland face changed a little; his cruel lower lip protruded. He got up. "I see it's no use to talk to you, Craig. Oh, by the way, your divorce is still in good standing, I presume?"

Craig's straight, dark eyebrows made a line across his face. "What do you mean?"

"Oh, nothing," replied Nicky airily. "Except Drue is in circulation again. Prettier than ever. I'd forgotten"—he stopped, laughed a little—"well, no—not quite forgotten. After all, she did leave you once and I daresay you remember why. So if she is absolutely free . . ."

Craig declared shortly, "Drue is perfectly free. As you know, Nicky. Now get out."

When he'd gone, Craig lay for a long time looking at nothing, with a very grim expression.

Late in the afternoon Alexia came. She looked very beautiful (not at all like a recently bereaved widow) in a handsome tea-gownish dress, emerald green and trailing. It seemed to me that Craig's jaw set itself a little rigidly when he looked at her, but he promptly sent me away.

Drue was sitting at the writing table when I reached her room. Sir Francis lay like a little brown muf on the table beside her, his head on her arm.

"Sit down, Sarah. What happened? Did Dr. Chivery drive you away again?"

"Alexia, this time," I said a little grimly.

"Oh, Alexia." Her eyelids went down and she patted the little dog's vigilant head. And said suddenly, completely without expression, "He's in love with her, you know. I suppose now—after a decent interval—they'll marry."

I repressed an evil impulse to make a caustic comment, and she went on, "I was wrong . . . I thought if I saw Craig again—but I was wrong."

"Nonsense!"

"No. It isn't nonsense. You see, I know. He's still in love with her, Sarah. Nicky says so. Besides I know . . ."

She took up a pen and traced a circle with it slowly. "I'd better tell you, Sarah. I think that's what started everything. Alexia and Craig, I mean. You see—Alexia was in the garden with Craig a few minutes before he was shot. Nicky told me. And I think—mindful of the trooper outside her door, she whispered—"I think Conrad shot him."

"Sh! Craig!"

"Sh! He'll hear you."

act creating a director of intelligence and that all the services be required to turn information over to him so that it may be examined, supplemented, co-ordinated and interpreted by trained men and then made available to the President and other responsible executives. That is really all there is to it. It is not proposed to abolish existing agencies, though certainly some could be abolished or consolidated with profit.

IT IS merely a common-sense plan for removing a handicap under which we labor as a nation and which would place us at great disadvantage in international conferences and world affairs. It is a plan to equip us with knowledge that will enable us to act with intelligence. There seems little room for argument as to the wisdom of this course. Yet there already are wild charges that the idea is to establish an "American Gestapo"; that it is proposed to create a "super spy system"; that no citizen's privacy would be safe—and others of a similar silliness.

TO ALL this the complete answer is that there would be in the proposed machinery no vestige of police power. Further, it would be entirely under the control of Congress, which could at any time end its existence by cutting off its appropriation. The opposition mostly comes from heads of certain services which want to be left alone, who fear they may lose their jobs or be overshadowed by the new director. None of these are good reasons. They should not be allowed to stand in the way of a re-

Board to Study
Rivers is Requested

HARRISBURG, Feb. 19 — The Legislature was asked recently to authorize the appointment of a 12-man commission to study the needs and requirements of the port of Philadelphia and seek Federal funds to clean up the Schuylkill and Delaware River to improve shipping conditions.

No action was taken on the resolution, introduced by Senator John H. Dent (D., Westmoreland), which also provides for a $25,000 appropriation to carry out its purpose.

Mr. Dent, who asserted in his resolution that, "due to the accumulation of refuse and waste, both industrial and domestic, the port is threatened with the complete elimination of seagoing travel," and that as much Federal funds as possible should be sought with the State to match the amount from the $110-000,000 surplus. He estimated the total cost between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000.

"The wealth, growth and prosperity of the port of Philadelphia is essential and necessary to the well being of the State and Nation as a whole," his resolution read.
"The acuteness of the problem of the port of Philadelphia is as important as any other problem relating to pollution in the State as a whole."

Under the Dent resolution, the Governor, president pro tempore of the Senate and the speaker of the House would each name four members of the commission.
Federal aid and assistance should be sought, he said, because the use of the port is not restricted to citizens of Philadelphia and the rest of Pennsylvania.

American Marines Storm Ashore at Iwo Jima

Volcanos," Nimtz announced, adding that the invasion was staged by the Fifth Amphibious Corps of the Marines.

Invasion of Iwo, site of the enemy's main interceptor station of the U. S. Superfortress Marianas Tokyo route, followed 76 consecutive days of bombing by Army Liberators and other planes of the strategic airforce, Pacific Ocean areas.

The Yanks' way was, thus, considerably softened, but the Japs were not knocked out by the shattering bombardment, which during the last four days was supported by mighty naval rifles of a powerful American fleet, which included battleships, cruisers and destroyers. As the Leathernecks came ashore, leaping from their landing barges and rolling up from the surf in amphibious vehicles and weapons carrier, the Japs gave evidence that they intended to fight for the is and which is within fighter range of Tokyo.

(The Japs admitted that the Americans achieved landing on Iwo declaring in a broadcast heard by the FCC that the Yanks stormed ashore at "at least two points" and adding that "heavy fighting is in progress."

(According to the enemy, a "violent barrage" with American warships standing only little more than one-half mile offshore preceded the landings on the south and east coasts of the island. The first wave, coming ashore in approximately 100 landing craft, hit the beach about 8 o'clock Monday morning, and was followed 30 minutes later by approximately 200 more boatloads of Americans.

(The Tokyo radio, which previously had asserted that four "abortive" landing attempts were "repulsed," said that the Americans "commenced large-scale simultaneous landings at the eastern and southern sectors of the island. It added:

("Our garrison units intercepted the enemy on the beach and they are carrying on a ghastly interception battle with the co-operation of the coastal artillery and air force."

(Moreover, the Japs claimed that two U. S. battleships and "four or five" cruisers were in the task force that pounded Iwo for three days throughout Sunday, but asserted that they had been met with a "terrific artillery" fire from the shore defenses.)

Under the over-all command of Lieut. Gen. Holland Smith—veteran of Japan and other successful Pacific invasions—the Marines went ashore in their first operation since September 15 at which time they invaded Palau. Elements of the Fourth and Fifth Marine divisions participated in the current operation.

The landing on Iwo threatened that island's southernmost airrome, which comprised at last report three valuable strips in the Futatsune area one of the regions mentioned in enemy reports of previous landing attempts.

(CBS correspondent Webley Edwards, who viewed the invasion from an airplane, declared that there was a "whale of a scrap" going on in Iwo, with "hundreds" of warships and transports adding their weight to the landing fighters. ("Some 8,000 rockets were fired into Jap positions," he added.)

A 9TH AIR FORCE SERVICE COMMAND BASE, FRANCE—The Ordnance Supply and Maintenance company of a Ninth Air Force Service Command group in France, of which Pvt. Anthony Biancosino, Bristol, Pa., is a member, was commended recently by the group commander for having established and maintained an enviable record during one year's service to the medium bomber missions of the Ninth Air Force.

The commendation, directed to the company by Group Commander Lt. Col. William Fisher, of Kansas City, Mo., said in part, "It is with great pleasure that I commend your company for the exemplary performance of duty during the past year. You have added to your accomplishments of superior performance and upheld the highest traditions of the Ninth Air Force Service Command. You have maintained your weapons, provided instruction to subordinate units, made a speedy and superior transition to a new type of aircraft, and in general written into the history of your unit the chapter of a successful year." Private Biancosino, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dominick Biancosino, Logan street, Bristol, Pa., has completed his first year in this action-packed theater of operations.

being heard by or on behalf of President Roosevelt. "The prayer of millions has been answered," Mr. Chamberlain told the House of Commons. "Our anxiety has been lifted from our hearts."

"In our relations with other countries everything depends upon there being sincerity and goodwill on both sides. I believe that there is sincerity and goodwill on both sides."

The present New Deal emphasis on the theory that "we must fight for peace just as we have fought the war" was lifted bodily from Chamberlain.

"Peace is not to be obtained by sitting still and waiting for it to come," said the Peacemaker of Munich. "It requires active and positive effort. . . . We have only laid the foundations of peace. The superstructure is not even begun."

It is both ironic and disturbing to remember that the author of the historic sell-out of principle for expediency at Munich was proud of his appeasement, and that he described it in terms so closely parallel to the language of the Big Three Report.

This coincidence cannot help serve to strengthen the expressions of uneasiness that Churchill and Roosevelt may have sold much more than Poland down the river merely trying to keep in the good graces of Russia.

Unless the Crimea Agreement can be shown to be an instrument for justice and freedom, with teeth in it that will keep not only one small nation from attacking another but both of them out from under the heel of large nations, the plan is a snare and a delusion.

There must be a thread of high principle binding the nations together in any program of lasting peace. Mere mutual fear and anger over the deeds of a single nation will not be enough.

Neither will appeasement.

A heated discussion of the dog situation in the town brought the councilmen to the decision of having the State dog enforcement officer come in the town to deal with the problem. Despite repeated warnings to dog owners about licenses, keeping dogs on their own property or on a leash when walking, the borough is still receiving numerous complaints about the animals ruining shrubs and lawns and getting into garbage. Council agreed that the trouble has come about due to the inability of obtaining a dog catcher, but warned that the nuisance must stop.

ROHM & HAAS GIRLS TO PLAY HERE TONIGHT

An added attraction will be played on the Mutual Aid floor tonight as the Rohm & Haas girls meet the Atlantic Products girls' team. Both of these teams are members of the Trenton Playground League. In the regular Youth League games, Franklin will meet the Catholic Boys' Club and the Bristol Aces clash with the Harriman Methodist. First game will get under way at seven o'clock.

The Rohm & Haas and Atlantic Products teams have met several times during the course of the Trenton League season and a close game was always the result. The chemical mixers will have in their starting lineup: Gallagher, McLean, Bachofer, McHugh, Tuchler and Boyer, while the Atlantic lineup will have: Lorenzo, Snelson, Pukace, Costner, A. Robinson and M. Robinson.

Victory for the Harriman Methodist or the Bristol Aces would put them within striking distance of the league-leading teams. The Aces and Methodists are even in the season's standing with two wins and two defeats. The Catholic Boys' Club has yet to taste a triumph but the tide may turn tonight and a triumph will put them one step out of the cellar, since Coach Centonze has added "Sonny" Fields to his roster.

A large turnout is expected for the trio of contests. Officials of the circuit urge the public to attend so that enough revenue can be made to continue the league for the remainder of the season.
